50X1-HUM

- Zujevic has committed a wrong to his party and to his country. The Communist Party has the unquestionable right, it is asserted, to forgive the errors and wrongs committed by one of its members against the Party; nevertheless, Zujevic should be required to answer for treasonable acts against his country. The pronouncements he has made to date cannot be accepted in explanation for his acts. Zujevic, who is a high government official and a graduate lawyer, [redacted] cannot excuse himself by claiming that he did not know his work was treasonable to his country, nor can he offer the puerile explanation that he was oblivious to what the Russians were seeking of him.

2. These political circles assert that Zujewic should be tried and sentenced for treason, after which the Government and Supreme Court would reserve the right to grant him a complete or partial amnesty.
3. Many members of the opposition to the present regime contend that untold numbers of young men, who, as minor government officials or employees committed minor wrongs not comparable to those of Zujewic, were tried and given sentences by the Government, whereas Zujewic has not been subjected to the normal jurisdictional procedure.
